

Joys and Concerns Policy

This is a very important time for the congregation; a time of vulnerability and disclosure. It is a time when we share with the community our personal joys and celebrations as well as our concerns and sorrows. It is not a time for announcements or political statements.

To respect both confidentiality and privacy, persons are asked to share their own concerns and not to share the concerns of others publicly unless you have specific permission or a request from another to do so. Doing otherwise is to breach trust and render a sacred moment unsafe.

Persons will be asked to keep their remarks brief so that all may share in this time. If this time of sharing is to be kept in the life of the UUFB, it must be protected by all members and friends.
